When Winfield Stratton struck gold in the mountains west of Colorado City in 1891, he set in motion a series of events that would enrich the lives of Coloradans to this day. Stratton's will provided for the establishment of the Myron Stratton Home, which has been caring for the elderly and the poor since 1913. While the Myron Stratton Home's tradition of caring is steeped in history, its financial and accounting system, Sage 300 ERP, is state of the art.

Flawless conversion

"We moved to Sage 300 ERP from Sage Pro ERP when we learned Sage Pro was being phased out," explains Candice Harvey, business manager for Myron Stratton Home. "It is very important to us to keep our software current. The migration path to Sage 300 ERP was straightforward and cost effective, and it has proven to be a great fit for us."

Myron Stratton Home worked with its Sage business partner to plan the migration and data conversion, which Harvey reports proceeded flawlessly. She took advantage of online courses through Sage University to train herself and her team.

Power and functionality

The reporting tools within Sage 300 ERP are proving to be a favorite for Harvey. "I used to use a separate program to collect data from the software and then import it into Excel to get the reports we needed," she says. "Now I can do it all from within Sage 300 ERP, saving me many steps and much time. Plus, the data is automatically updated for us, ensuring our reports are always current."

In addition to the General Ledger, Accounts Payable, and Bank Reconciliation components of Sage 300 ERP, the organization also uses Sage Fixed Assets. "Going forward, we wanted to stay with Sage products due to the trust and confidence we have in their solutions," Harvey concludes. "Sage offers power and functionality combined with easy and intuitive operation. What more could we need?"

"The migration path to Sage 300 ERP was straightforward and cost effective, and it has proven to be a great fit for us."
